Contents Early life Ardham Toss, one of the first characters of the game, is a disguised gladiator, and the oldest of the group. He may also be the most skilled gladiator, but he is old and can be selfish. During the early part of the first game, one of his friends fell in battle and was captured by the soldiers. Because they threatened to take Toss' friend, he went into hiding. He wanted to get back and rescue his friend before it is too late and he falls in the same trap. Later in the first game, Toss is revealed to have been captured by the Empire as the real gladiator. However, he secretly escaped and was stopped by the "Vanquished Soldiers." He was captured again and had the same treatment as the other captives. At that point, he figured he was already imprisoned enough and just wanted to enjoy the rest of the trip. He went into hiding until he and the other gladiators were sent to a place that was supposedly conquered by the Empire. At the beginning of the second game, he and the other survivors were informed that their destination is in fact the ancient Dragon Quarter. He and the others managed to escape the Empire and go to the Dragon Quarter. They are then thrown into the Lioncage. It is unknown where Toss is now. From what we see of him in the novels, he could be either in Pyr, the Caliph's kingdom, or the village of Dojig. Toss's bio In a way, Toss was one of the first characters in the game series. He was just one of many gladiators that fought in the Arena of Glory to earn his keep. He was not very skilled at his gladiatorial fighting, nor was he particularly intelligent, but he was very strong and durable. Toss was also a very good leader of gladiators because he knew how to play the other gladiators along and had a better understanding of their strengths and weaknesses. Because of his disadvantages, Toss's only chance to survive was to not give up. Unfortunately, he was captured
